KILAUEA VOLCANO ON EXHIBITION AGAIN
MADAME PELE COMES FORTH
IN CONTINUOUS PERFORMANCE

At 5 o'clock last evening a telephone message from the Volcano House announced a renewed outbreak of Kilauea, with a large fountain and a steady stream of molten lava pouring out into the crater. Messrs. Chas. Beal and Wm. Williamson of Honolulu had just returned from the pit much excited and gave a thrilling description of the activity, which is more violent than heretofore witnessed during the recent outbreak. They report that there is a thundering roar issuing from the pit, which was distinctly heard several hundred yards away. They first noticed detonations like cannon when they arrived at the corral, and when they reached the craters brink, a magnificent display of rocks hurling through the air, puffs of cinders and sulphur smoke and a steady flow of lava could be clearly seen. They only remained a few moments to watch the sight, hurrying back to the hotel to spread the news. The flow of lava is said to be continuous and about six feet wide.

A SECRET INVESTIGATION
IMPLICATES SUPT. ATKINSON

(By Wireless to THE TRIBUNE.)

Honolulu, Mar. 17.—The Committee on Public Expenditures yesterday submitted to the House a report on the conditions in the Department of Education. The report with accompanying evidence was submitted to the Governor, who has since written to Superintendent Atkinson intimating that he ought to resign. Superintendent Atkinson replied that he dislikes to resign under fire and before he has a chance to defend himself. Investigation was conducted in secret, which fact has increased popular displeasure.

Kona Fires Break Out Again.

After believing the forest fire which has been raging on the mountain slopes of South Kona for two weeks had been effectually put out, the fire broke out afresh about a week ago, and before it could be gotten under control, the burning district had spread almost to Papa, near Hokena. This means that the fires have extended nearly a mile farther. Fire Warden Geo. P. McDougall has remained on the scene and Sheriff Searle is with him rendering such assistance within the power of the police department.

The former fire had been subdued, at the time Forester Hosmer left Hilo, although there were smoldering embers and burning logs, scattered over the burned district which covered about four square miles. Every day for a week, Warden McDougall with a gang of men made a detour of the burned section, stamping out such flames as appeared dangerous and likely to spread. Not satisfied a final trip was made on Friday, March 10th, and when he reached the brow of Kapuna hill, the whole mountain side seemed ablaze with flames. A heavy wind had sprung up in the night, which it is supposed caused the second outbreak.

With a gang of fifty men, Mr. McDougall commenced work at once digging trenches and making clearings around the burning woods. He dug a ditch two feet wide and two feet deep along the upper boundary, and made a clearing of twenty-four feet along the mauka edge of the ditch in the hope of stopping the further advance of the fire. This has worked successfully, and late last evening Mr. McDougall telephoned that he believed he had the fire under control. Nearly 3,000 acres of timber have now been destroyed. The fire did not reach Papa and did not make much progress up the mountain side except toward the south in Alikia district. Forester Hosmer is now in Honolulu and has been kept advised of the progress of the fire.

Fishermen Required to Register.

Commenting on the recent disaster among the Japanese fisherman when three of their number were drowned at sea, Sheriff Searle said: "There should be a law passed by the Legislature requiring all fishermen to have their boats and names of occupants registered. This ought to be an easy matter and need not entail any expense on the fishermen. It would enable the authorities to locate missing fishermen, as in this instance."
